Methods of in-body citation

- ❑ Paraphrase (Author page).
- ❑ Author's name in the paraphrase (page).
- ❑ "Quotation" (Author page).

How do we... paraphrase?

- ❑ Introduce and restate another person's original ideas in your own words.
- ❑ Do not follow the author's sentence structure or sequence of ideas.
- ❑ Cite with parentheses.

Paraphrase with parenthetical citation:

There are difficulties in labeling children with a type of intelligence, including the problem that labels may last, while the assessment may change (Gardner 139).

Paraphrase with in-text citation:

Gardner explains that there are difficulties in labeling children with a type of intelligence, including the problem that labels may last, while the assessment may change (139).

Direct quotation:

Educators are cautioned that "...labels tend to stick, and few people go back later to document a shifting profile of intelligences" (Gardner 139).

When to cite.

- Cite all mentions of another author's original ideas, statistics, studies, borrowed concepts & phrases, images, quoted material, and tables.
- You do not have to cite facts which are commonly known by your audience and easily verified in reference sources.
- When in doubt, cite your source.

You decide: which would you need to cite?

A. On September 11, 2001, the World Trade Center and the Pentagon were attacked by hijacked airplanes.

B. Atta, Binalshibh, al Shehhi, and Jarrah had lived in Germany and were chosen over more established Al Qaeda members due to their exposure to the West and ability to speak English.

B: Correct!

"A" would not need to be cited – a well-known historical fact that your audience has heard of.

"B" would need to be cited, it is very specific information that is not commonly known.

How would you cite it?

In-body:

Atta, Binalshibh, al Shehhi, and Jarrah had lived in Germany and were chosen over more established Al Qaeda members due to their exposure to the West and ability to speak English (National Commission 160).

Works Cited:

National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States. The 9/11 Commission Report. New York: W.W. Norton, 2004. Print.

Try again: which would you need to cite?

A. "The science labs at East St. Louis High School are 30 to 50 years outdated."

B. When public schools were segregated, conditions were not equal.

A: Correct!

"A" would need to be cited – it is an exact quote. Even if it was rephrased without quotation marks, the information is quite specific.

"B" is commonly known and repeated in multiple reference books.

How would you cite it?

In-body:

"The science labs at East St. Louis High School are 30 to 50 years outdated" (Kozol 27).

Works Cited:

Kozol, Jonathan. Savage inequalities: Children in America's Schools. New York: HarperCollins, 1991. Print.

Works Cited page: MLA style citation

- Include a "Works Cited" page listing all sources cited within the body of the paper.
- Double-space, alphabetize the entries.
- Do not indent first line, but do indent the following line(s) in an entry. (Called "hanging indent" in MSWord.)

Citing at the end of your paper:

- All sources cited within the body of your paper should be cited in full at the end, on a "Works Cited" page.
- Citing "in full" means that you should account for all major bibliographic elements, not just the author and date.

Elements for citing books:

- 1. Author.
- 2. Title of the Book.
- 3. Edition number.
- 4. Place of Publication:
- 5. Publisher,

Quiz: What are the two dates for citing online sources?

- a. Author's birth date and retrieval date.
- b. Copyright date and date last updated.
- c. Source date (most current listed,) and date of access.

Answer: c.

Source date and date of access.

A website date is sometimes hard to find. "Date last updated," if available, may be used.

Use the abbreviation (n.d.) if there is no date.
